Cold snap could mean higher prices on tree fruit and stone fruit in Chicago

Chicago Tribune

After March brought us a miraculous string of 80-degree days, Midwestern fruit farmers were praying for an equally miraculous April—one warm enough to protect all the vulnerable fruit blossoms coaxed into early bloom.

But a punishing frost in the last days of April dashed those hopes along with most of the Midwest tree fruit harvest, experts and farmers say.

“Our tree fruit and stone fruit took a bad hit with about a 70 percent crop loss and 100 percent on some of our peach trees,” said Mick Klug, whose Southwest Michigan orchards supply some restaurants and farmers markets in the Chicago area. “It’s right next to a disaster on tree fruit.”

Chicago-area farmers markets, many of which opened this month, are likely to watch this disaster play out in coming months with scant and expensive supplies of peaches, cherries, apricots, plums and apples.

Mark Longstroth, a fruit educator with the Michigan State University extension, has been touring local farms in recent weeks to assess the damage and says the picture is grim.

“We’ll be lucky to see a third of the crop this year,” Longstroth said.

He noted that although trees saw some damage from cold nights in early and mid-April, it was the very late April frosts that dealt the worst blow.

“We were all very depressed with those widespread freezes” on April 27 and 29, he said. “They caused a lot of damage and now we are just waiting to see the extent.”

Farther south at Nichols Farm and Orchard in Marengo, Ill., the picture is not much better.

“It affected us a lot,” said Doreen Nichols of Nichols Farm, which grows fruits and vegetables for more than a dozen Chicago-area farmers markets and several restaurants. “We had such an early spring and it looked like it was going to be a great year, but then we had that cold snap when it went down to 28 degrees. Now I think we’ve lost about 90 percent of the apple crop.”

Seedling Enterprise’s Adam Houseman echoed her sentiments.

“It looks bad for tree fruit,” Houseman said of the crops in Seedlings Orchards in South Haven. “It definitely looks bad for the whole state, but we won’t know the full extent of the damage for a couple of weeks.”

Inside the war on youth votes

Stephen Markley

» redeye@tribune.com

A Republican super PAC recently rolled out an ad accusing President Obama of being too “cool,” and with that, the GOP completed its total transformation into a crotchety old man who keeps your football when it lands in his yard.

I’ve written about the headwinds facing our generation: We’ve been loaded with debt, shoved into the worst economy since the Great Depression, and told we’re entitled brats even as both political parties make plans for us to pay for their tax cuts, entitlement programs, disastrous wars and environmental crises. Sweet deal, huh?

If we want to tackle any of these issues, we have to do more than tweet our outrage and Occupy our discontent. We have to vote. However, one of the two major political parties has taken its youth hostility a step further, actively working to stop you from voting. Forget the “war on women.” The real war is on Millennials.

Young people, wherever our quarrels may lie with Obama and the Democrats, increasingly tell pollsters we can’t vote Republican. Perhaps they wouldn’t use these words, but I will: It’s become a homophobic, xenophobic, hyper-religious refuge for people who don’t believe in science or—judging from things like Congressman Paul Ryan’s (R-Wis.) budget—basic math. It’s an entire political party hoarding jars of its own toenail clippings.

Rather than addressing issues young people tell pollsters they care about such as LGBT rights, ending disastrous military adventures, tackling climate change and supporting education, the GOP has decided on a different tactic.

In state after state, they are passing laws to discourage young people from voting.

Reported by Rolling Stone a year ago, most of the worst-case scenarios for voter suppression have now come to fruition: Under the guise of combating the non-existent threat of voter fraud, state legislatures are enacting laws aimed at disenfranchising Democratic-leaning constituencies, most prominently young people. Roughly 30 states have laws either passed or pending that would require a government-issued photo ID for voting because 18 percent of young people do not have such an ID (neither do 25 percent of African-Americans).

The next prohibition is banning out-of-state IDs because these often are what college students have in their wallets. In Florida, a new law requires voter registration forms to be turned in within 48 hours or individuals can face a $1,000 fine and even jail time, which has caused the non-partisan MTV initiative “Rock the Vote” to flee the state.

An analysis by the New York Times found that new voter registration in Florida has ground to a halt. A civil-rights advocacy group called the Advancement Project said all this amounts to “the largest legislative effort to scale back voting rights in a century.”

Or as New Hampshire state House Speaker William O’Brien put it, “Voting as a liberal, that’s what kids do,” as he tried to pass a bill last year that would ban college students from voting from their school addresses.

Whatever your political views, this should bother you. They can delay all they want, but eventually a young, educated, non-white electorate is going to put a biblical hurt on this incarnation of the Republican Party. I’d prefer this election. It’s time to get our football back.

WHAT'S THE DEAL WITH THE FEMALE CONDOM?

Advocates sharing word of the safe-sex method that's not so well-known

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

The excuses for not wearing a condom often sound like this: "I hate them." "They're too tight." "I don't have one."

In the face of such complaints, public health officials are pushing a relatively under-the-radar option to prevent consequences of unprotected sex such as unwanted pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases.

It's called the female condom, and it looks something like the male contraceptive, only bigger. About 2 inches in diameter and 6 inches long, the female condom is made of nitrile, which is thinner than the latex typically used in male condoms. Billed as the only barrier method that can be initiated by a receptive partner, it can be inserted before vaginal or anal sex.

Lately, it has gained traction as a coalition of women and gay men's health organizations in Chicago continue a campaign to bring the female condom to the masses. But the device faces uphill battles. Although the female condom has been around since 1993, some people don't know about it, what it looks like or how it's used. It's also pricier and more difficult to find in stores (other than sex shops) compared with male condoms. But supporters say its benefits outweigh the drawbacks.

The female condom's biggest selling point, according to advocates, is that it allows the receptive partner to take charge.

"I felt really empowered knowing I was in control of protecting myself," said Melissa Janiszewski, 33, who lives in the South Loop. "We live in a culture where it's all dependent on the men" to use protection, she said. Janiszewski is the policy and community education coordinator for the AIDS Foundation of Chicago.

Since April, members of the Chicago Female Condom Campaign have promoted the barrier method by posting Facebook photos of people holding signs explaining why they like female condoms. Meanwhile, the Chicago-based Female Health Company has redesigned the packaging of the condoms to better compete with mass-marketed male condoms.

And Chicago's Department of Public Health is aiming to give away 10 million male and female condoms combined this year. The FDA also approved a softer, less expensive version of the female condom in 2009.

Still, many young adults haven't been introduced to it at doctors' offices or student health clinics.

"Younger people ... didn't know this is an option; it's not on their radar," said Mary Brewster, program coordinator of Pediatric AIDS Chicago Prevention Initiative, which partners with the local condom campaign. "It's not as normalized as male condoms and not as readily available, which is really something we're trying to break down."

Even though the FDA has not approved use of the condom for anal sex, some health-care organizations promote it as another form of protection for gay men.

Donte Smith, 26, learned about female condoms from his friends. He thought he couldn't use them at first because they are designed for women, but added he now prefers them to male condoms. "They're so much comfier and roomier than regular condoms," said Smith, who lives in Cragin and identifies as queer.

He said the packaging can be intimidating and a turnoff to men because it says the word female. "A lot of queer and gay men need to

THE DETAILS

When used correctly and consistently, experts say, the female condom is as effective as the male condom in reducing the risk of sexually transmitted infections. About 5 percent of women who use the female condom perfectly experience unintended pregnancy in the first year, compared with a 2 percent failure rate for male condoms. Women can use the female condom in conjunction with hormonal contraception methods. The female condom should not be used together with the male condom because it increases the possibility of breakage.

SHAKY START

One major challenge for the female condom is overcoming the bad rap from the condom's first version, which people said was noisy, uncomfortable, thick and not unlike having sex with a "plastic bag." "We failed to teach people about them. So women got them, took them home and opened them up and go, 'Oh, what do I do with this?'" said Rebecca Bouck, U.S. program manager for the Female Health Company, which manufactures the item. Now the company is focused on training health providers and educating the public on its use.

know they have another option. They have choices when it comes to safe sex." It's common for young people to be unfamiliar with the female condom, said Debby Herbenick, a sexual health educator at the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender, and Reproduction at Indiana University. "At least in my experience when I teach about contraceptives, the general perception is it's unusual, or weird, or they have never seen one," she said. Availability, however, is the biggest challenge to changing that. Community organizations such as the Center on Halsted and STD clinics give out the condoms free, but few retail stores stock them. Outside of Walgreens, which last year started selling the condoms in select stores, they're mostly available at sex shops and clinics. Planned Parenthood sells them for $1 apiece to people without insurance while male condoms go for a quarter. Retail outlets price female condoms at about $7.99 a three-pack, compared to $6.99 for a three-pack of most male condoms. The demand for female condoms hasn't been high at the Early to Bed sex shop in Edgewater, for example. "It is something that we sell comparatively so few of compared to any other safer sex device that we have," owner Searah Deysach said. She points to cost as a big reason. Sarah Sloane, 42, manager of the Pleasure Chest in Lakeview, cites cost concerns as well. "It's not my primary barrier, but I do like to lean on it, especially when I have a partner that may need different kinds of sensation to enjoy himself," she said. "If I have a regular partner and we're having sex two to three times a week, that adds up really fast." But there are benefits. The female condom can be used by people with latex allergies because it is latex-free. It's much thinner than latex so it feels more natural and transmits body heat. It's also safe for all lubricants, whereas most male condoms can be used only with water-based lubricants. Experts say the female condom, which has an inner and outer ring, may better stimulate both a woman's clitoris and a man's penis. Sloane found inserting the female condom awkward at first, not great for vigorous sex, yet also enjoyable and perfect for her latex sensitivity. And it's not a mood killer. Putting the condom in ahead of time can be sexy, like wearing lingerie, she said. "If you know you're ready ... it can be a really hot thing," Sloane said. Janiszewski alternates between female and male condoms as her method of birth control. "It feels really good and my boyfriend likes it," she said. Occupy hosts 'People's Summit'

Chicago Tribune

Members of Occupy Chicago and people from across the country gathered in an aging warehouse just outside Chinatown on Saturday to discuss their opposition to next weekend's NATO summit and finish planning for the mass protests they will stage during the meetings of world leaders.

It was the first day of a two-day "People's Summit" organized by Occupy Chicago and billed as an alternative to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's May 20-21 summit at McCormick Place.

The event began with several speakers addressing about 200 people in a loft-style room on the seventh floor of the warehouse on the west bank of the Chicago River at West Cermak Road, which has served as Occupy Chicago's headquarters for months.

Many of the speakers said members of Occupy and other protesters should take credit for President Obama's decision in March to move the G-8 summit—which had also been scheduled for next weekend in Chicago—to the Camp David presidential retreat in Maryland. The White House said the G-8 financial meeting was moved because leaders wanted a more informal setting.

They also spoke out against military and economic policies backed by the U.S. and other Western powers that they say hurt the working class and developing countries.

Kevin Rambo Jr., 19, said he traveled to Chicago from San Diego a few weeks ago to participate in May Day and NATO protests and "to be a part of sending the message that the global war machine has to end."

Rambo said he's been alternating between sleeping in a sleeping bag as part of a protest outside a city mental health clinic in Woodlawn that is slated to close and staying with relatives who live in the area.

Steven Schorzman and Deanna Goblirsch of Minnesota make granola bars Friday at First Lutheran Church of the Trinity. They were preparing for the upcoming "People's Summit" in Chicago. TERRENCE ANTONIO JAMES/TRIBUNE

"There's a revitalized activist community because of the Occupy movement, for the most part," he said, wearing an Occupy San Diego shirt in one of the warehouse's hallways. "Because of the growing number of people who are getting involved, I couldn't really not protest against NATO."

HUDSON FAMILY KILLINGS

Balfour convicted in slayings

As Academy Award-winning actress Jennifer Hudson stood in the silent courtroom Friday, shifting nervously from foot to foot, stardom and celebrity seemed worlds away.

She bowed her head as the verdict was read, then broke into soft sobs as a Cook County jury convicted her former brother-in-law, William Balfour, of murdering her mother, brother and nephew in October 2008.

Balfour faces a mandatory sentence of life in prison because he has been convicted of multiple murders. His attorney, Amy Thompson, said the Englewood man will appeal. TRIBUNE

The scene of a fatal accident late Saturday night. Four mothers were killed in a car crash when their vehicle hit a CTA Green Line "L" support beam in Austin. CHUCK BERMAN/TRIBUNE

4 killed in Austin collision

Chicago Tribune

At least five young children lost their mothers in an automobile accident Saturday night, just minutes before Mother's Day.

The four women, all friends, died when the car they were in hit a CTA Green Line "L" support column on Lake Street just west of Cicero Avenue in Austin, authorities said.

Family identified three of the women as Ieshia Nelson, 21; Tyshyra Hines, 21; and Bernadette Harris, 25. All three were mothers, family said. The fourth victim was identified as Alicia Goston, 22, by the Cook County medical examiner's office.

Three of the women died at the scene. Nelson, of the 1200 block of North Lockwood Avenue, was pronounced dead at Mount Sinai Hospital at 12:48 a.m. Sunday, according to the office.

The car, traveling at a "high rate of speed," ran into a light pole after hitting the CTA column and split into two about 11:55 p.m., according to a statement from Chicago police. No other information about the crash was available Sunday afternoon.

"Every one of them is a mother," said Hines' father, Anthony. "You can't explain it."

Relatives said the women had been out for the night, possibly attending a party. But no one could piece together what led up to the crash. Anthony Hines said he believes Nelson was driving the car.

"I don't know what happened," Anthony Hines said.

Harris' sister, Sheila Harris, said the young women didn't go out a lot. Instead, they focused their attention on their kids, work and school.

White House honors Chicago cop

A Chicago Police sergeant was honored at the White House on Saturday evening for capturing two assailants in an armed robbery in Hermosa late last year. Sgt. Don Jerome, who works in the Grand Central district, received a TOP COPS award from the National Association of Police Organizations and was honored by President Obama and Vice President Joe Biden.

CTA riders taken to hospital after crash

Two CTA bus passengers were taken to a hospital in good condition following a collision between the bus and a car in the Loop on Saturday afternoon, police said. The vehicles crashed at 2:09 p.m. in the 500 block of South State Street, said Officer Darryl Baety, a police spokesman, citing preliminary information.

South Loop bank branch robbed

A man with a scruffy beard and wearing a baseball cap robbed a TCF Bank branch inside a South Loop grocery store late Saturday afternoon, police said. The incident occurred about 5:20 p.m., when the robber demanded money from a teller at Jewel, 1224 S. Wabash Ave., according to a Central District police lieutenant. TRIBUNE

1 Russians march peacefully

About 10,000 people staged a mass "stroll" through Moscow on Sunday after police beat demonstrators upset over Vladimir Putin's return to the presidency. Protesters gathered at a statue and walked down Moscow's Boulevard Ring to an Occupy-style, 24-hour protest. Police took no action. REUTERS

2 Greek politics in chaos

Greek political leaders on Sunday ignored a final plea from the president to form a coalition government to avert a repeat election, pushing the debt-stricken nation closer to bankruptcy and a possible exit from the euro zone.

3 Merkel campaign on shaky ground

Chancellor Angela Merkel's conservatives suffered a crushing defeat on Sunday in an election in Germany's most populous state, a result that could embolden the left opposition to step up attacks on her European austerity policies. Merkel will seek a third term in 18 months.

4 Dalai Lama claims death plot

Tibet's Buddhist leader, the Dalai Lama, said he feared China may have plotted last year to kill him by sending female agents with poison on their hair and clothes to seek healing, asking him to touch them. The spiritual leader fled to India in 1959 after a failed uprising against Chinese rule.

5 Senator smacked down by church

Sen. Rand Paul, who said President Obama's views on gay marriage "couldn't get any gayer" Friday, was rebuked by an influential evangelical leader. Family Research Council President Tony Perkins said Sunday, "I don't think this is something we should joke about."

Horrific killings in Mexico

6 CADEREYTA JIMENEZ, Mexico Suspected drug gang killers dumped 49 headless bodies on a highway near Mexico's northern city of Monterrey in one of the country's worst atrocities in recent years.

The mutilated corpses of 43 men and six women, whose hands and feet also had been cut off, were found in a pile on a highway in the municipality of Cadereyta Jimenez in the early hours Sunday, officials from the state of Nuevo Leon said.

"What's complicating the identification of all the people was that they were all headless," said Jorge Domene, the Nuevo Leon government's spokesman for public security. Domene said the brutal Zetas drug gang claimed responsibility in a message found at the scene.

The headless victims have not been identified. Nuevo Leon Attorney General Adrian de la Garza said the corpses could be those of migrants passing through Mexico to the U.S. Migrants have been targeted by criminal gangs in the past.

The bodies showed signs of decay that indicated they may have been dead for days, de la Garza said. He also said there had been no mass disappearances reported in the state, suggesting the victims could have been killed elsewhere.

De la Garza said many of the bodies were tattooed, which could offer a clue to their identities. Violent street gangs in Central America such as the Maras have distinctive tattoos, though Domene said the victims did not show these markings.

ZETAS GANG HAS BLOODY HISTORY

The killings in Nuevo Leon were the latest in a string of mass slayings in Mexico. Many were in the northern part of the country, where the Zetas are battling to control smuggling routes. The Zetas gang was founded by Mexican-army deserters who became enforcers for the Gulf cartel, which once dominated the drug trade in northeastern Mexico.

President Felipe Calderon staked his reputation on bringing Mexico's drug gangs to heel, sending in the army to fight them shortly after taking office in December 2006. Since then, however, the violence has spiraled, and more than 50,000 people have died in the conflict.

Yahoo CEO said to have lied on resume

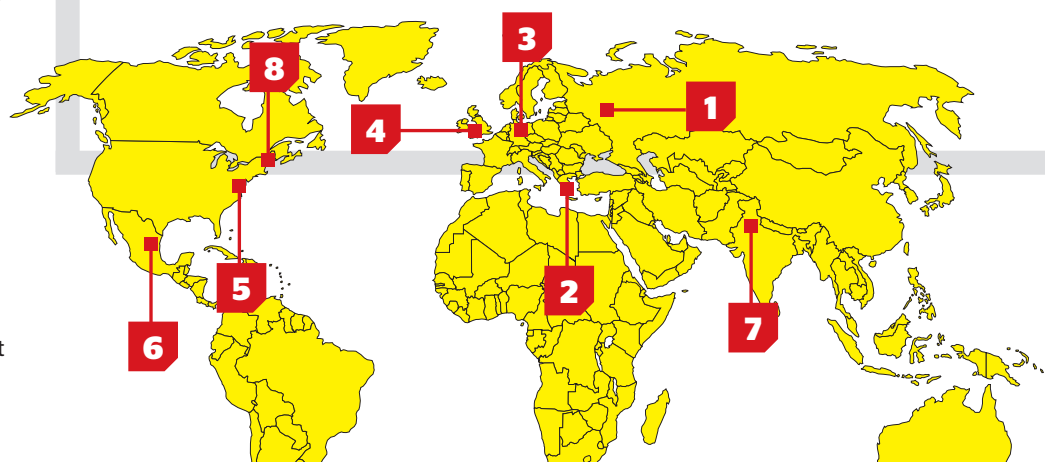

8 NEW YORK Yahoo CEO Scott Thompson soon will leave the company after it was found he embellished his college degree, two news reports said Sunday.

Thompson's published Yahoo bios—including the one in the company's latest annual report, a legal document that CEOs must personally swear are truthful—claimed he holds a bachelor's degree in both accounting and computer science from Stonehill College. His degree actually is only in accounting.

Tech blog AllThingsD was the first to report the news, and the New York Times followed up with an article saying Yahoo could make an announcement as soon as Monday. Both articles cited unnamed sources close to the company.

An official Yahoo spokesperson did not immediately reply to a request for comment. And a senior Yahoo executive couldn't confirm the reports, saying employees haven't received any internal information about Thompson leaving.

Yahoo media chief Ross Levinsohn will be named interim CEO, according to the Times.

the forgotten

You'd be forgiven if you didn't really pay attention to much else in Chicago sports the past six weeks besides the Blackhawks and Bulls' postseason runs—as brief as they were. But if that's been your focus, you've missed out on some good Chicago sports news. Here's what you may have overlooked. REDEYE

PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Meet your new Bears

The NFL draft at the end of April helped satisfy Bears fans' thirst for anything football-related. At least for a couple of days. In the first round of the draft at No. 19, the Bears selected defensive end Shea McClellin out of Boise State. He's been called a possible successor to Brian Urlacher at linebacker. High praise.

White Sox are in the thick of it

This really shouldn't come as a surprise, considering how average the AL Central has been during the past few years, but the Sox—as it stands right now—can safely say they are in the hunt for a division title. As recently as May 1, they were tied for first, and they've hovered around two to three games out of first since then.

The Fire aren't fit to be tied

The Men in Red set the MLS record for ties in a season last year, but that doesn't appear to be a feat they'll repeat. The Fire are 4-2-3 and safely in fourth place in the Eastern Conference. They just knocked off first-place Sporting Kansas City on Saturday night at Toyota Park.

US PRESSWIRE

Dempster tops all of baseball

No more Ryan Dumpster jokes this season. Cubs pitcher Ryan Dempster is not only the best in the NL with a 1.02 ERA, but he's the best in all of baseball. Take a bow.

Say hello to Mr. Perfect

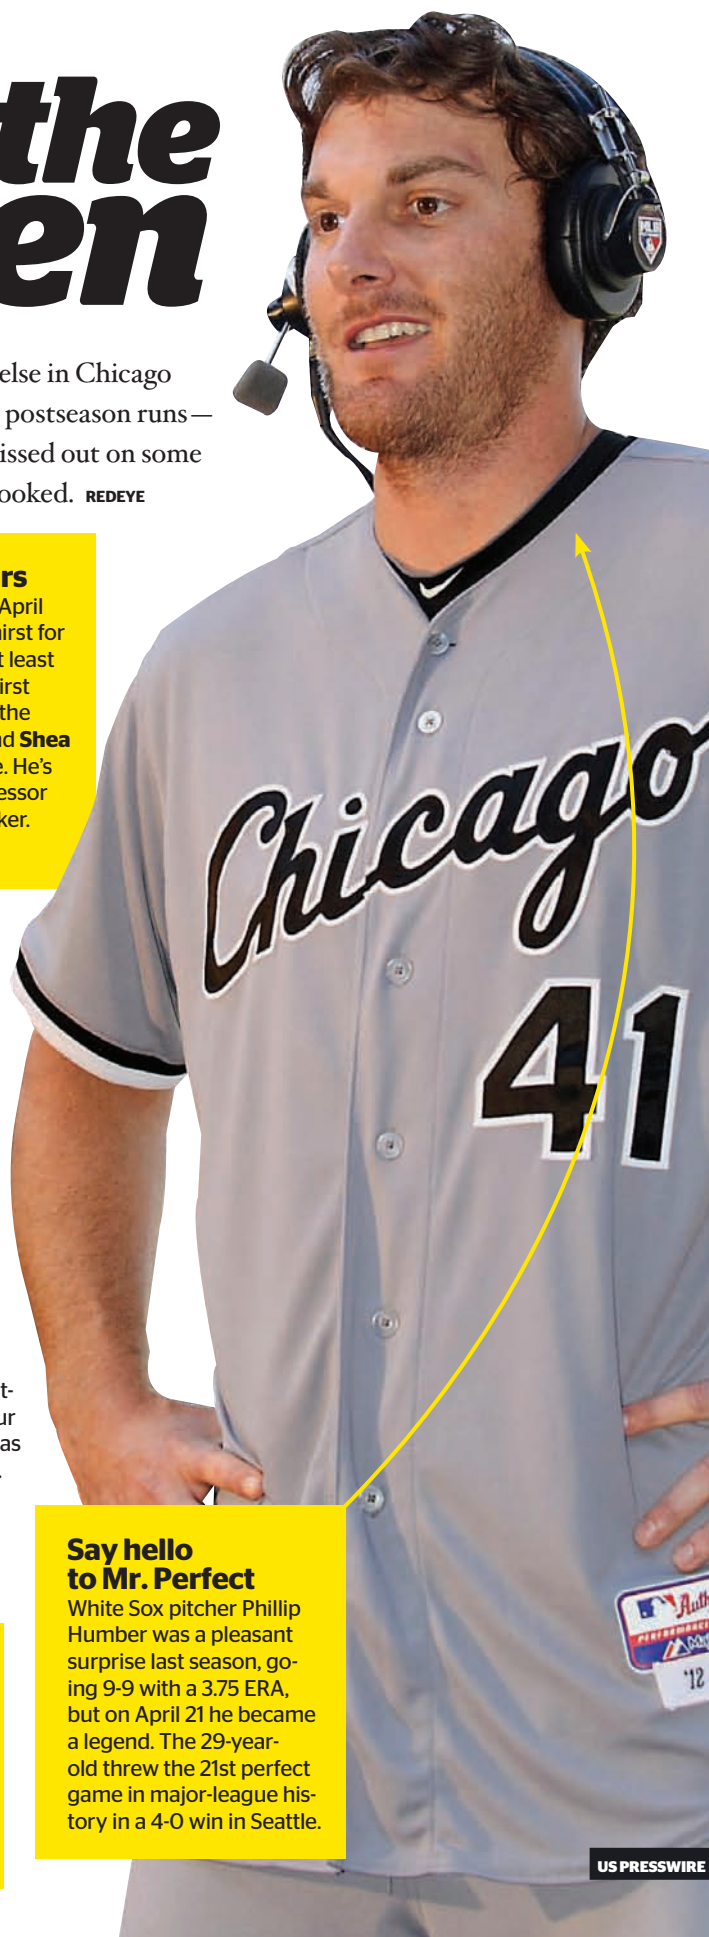

White Sox pitcher Phillip Humber was a pleasant surprise last season, going 9-9 with a 3.75 ERA, but on April 21 he became a legend. The 29-year-old threw the 21st perfect game in major-league history in a 4-0 win in Seattle.

Adam Dunn is back

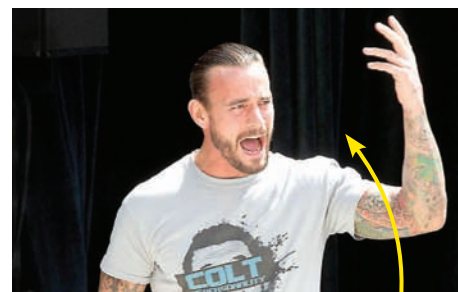

The White Sox slugger was a punching bag last season as he struggled through a season that saw him set the team record for strikeouts in a season while batting .159. This year, entering Sunday's game, Dunn leads the team with 26 RBIs and 11 homers. He's also hitting .248.

Cubs aren't the worst ever

The predictions for the Cubs in 2012 ranged from terrible to worst Cubs team ever. As it turns out, yes, the Cubs are pretty bad, but there are at least four other teams in baseball as bad as or worse than the North Siders.

WATCH

Philadelphia vs. Boston

6 p.m. Wednesday, TNT

Bulls fans, perhaps this NBA playoff series can satisfy your appetite for a little revenge. The 76ers ousted the Derrick Rose-less Bulls, but the Celtics are at mostly full strength, and they took Game 1 on Saturday.

ATTEND

Cubs vs. White Sox

1:20 p.m. Friday, Wrigley Field

The City Series, the Crosstown Classic, the Red Line Series, whatever you call it, the Cubs vs. White Sox interleague series is one of the best in baseball. Both teams might not be what you'd call "good," but that won't water down the battle of the North Side vs. the South Side.

ATTEND

Slaughter vs. Reading

7:35 p.m. Friday, Sears Centre Arena, Hoffman Estates

Come for the indoor football, stay for a birthday celebration for Sarge—the team's mascot—featuring fellow mascots. As for the Slaughter, they're on a three-game winning streak after losing six straight. You could call them a bunch of streakers.

1 Who's your favorite to win the NBA title now?

No one's beating the Oklahoma City Thunder. Unless it's Metta World Peace's elbow.

The Seattle Supersonics. Wait ... what?

NBA title? Never heard of it. La la la la, I can't hear you.

I'm rooting for the ABL. Anyone But LeBron.

"Favorite"? That's a loaded question that immediately disqualifies the Miami Heat.

2 How would you suggest sports fans forget about the Bulls disappointment?

Get outside and enjoy our six good weeks of weather we receive every year.

Refuse to live in the present. Live in the '90s (aka "the Jordan years") like I am.

Denial.

Drink the "booze" and say "Bulls won the Central Division. That's all that matters, yo."

Lock yourself in your house and have no contact with the outside world until July.

3 How do you feel about Luol Deng playing in the Olympics instead of having surgery?

His life. His body. He can do what he wants. But he'd better come back ready to be a monster for the Bulls.

Who? All I know is Toni Kukoc is going to regret playing against Michael and Scottie.

One country gave him a paycheck, the other a safe home. You wanna tell him the paycheck means more?

He's earned the right.

Hey, if he wins a medal, at least one Bull won something this year.

4 What'd Chicago miss while we were focused on the Bulls and Blackhawks?

They decided to start the baseball season anyway.

Marvel's "The Avengers" has the No. 1 box-office opening of all time, nerds.

Beyonce's baby, Super-Tan Lady and Kim & Kanye. Oh and everyone's inexplicably cool with Chris Brown again.

Chicago isn't missing anything. Smile, Rahm's cameras are focusing on you!

There was that one day when it didn't rain and actually felt like spring.

5 Pick a sports figure and tell us how they spent Mother's Day.

Derrick Rose. Laid up. Receiving lots of mom's love. And hopefully planning a kickass return.

Pretty sure Michael took Juanita out for a nice dinner. (What do you mean "look at a calendar"?)

I heard Patrick Kane is still trying to explain what "Two 5s = A 10" means to his mom.

Could've sworn I saw C.J. Watson with Marion Barber.

C.J. Watson and it involved lots of tears, hugs and comfort food.

KANE'S FOLLY?

HAWKS STAR FINDS HIMSELF IN ANOTHER INTERNET SCANDAL

Chicago Tribune

You want to believe Patrick Kane when he looks you in the eye and tells you he's growing up.

One of the last times he did so was in late January at the NHL All-Star Game in Ottawa. The Blackhawks forward had just finished a round of interviews with media when he stepped aside to talk of the maturation process he had undergone as a person.

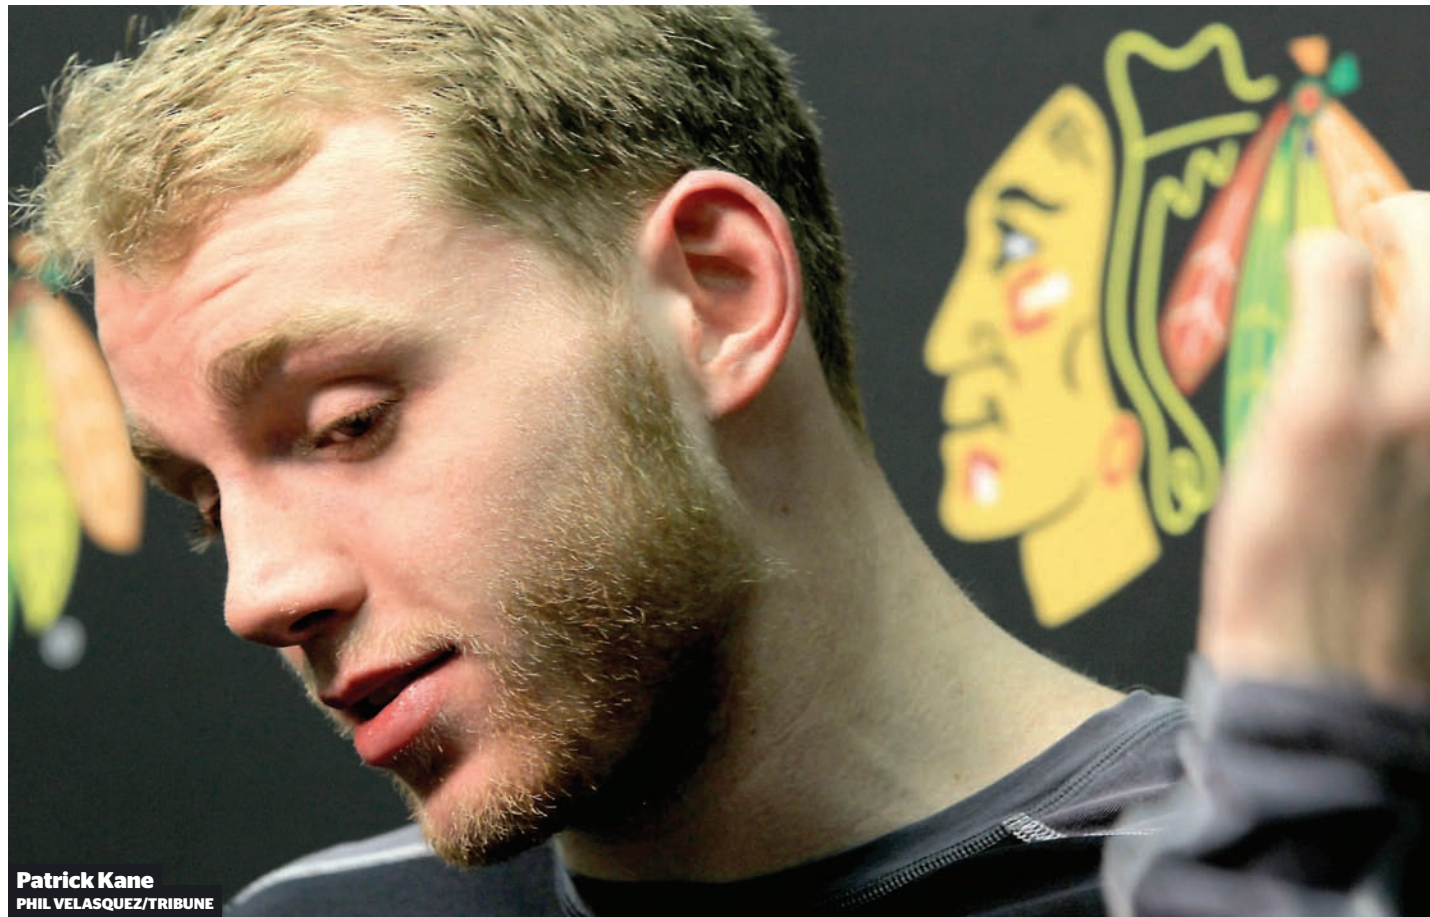

"I think you grow up every year, every day," Kane told Chris Kuc of the Tribune on Jan. 28. "You learn something new and try to really worry about what's important in life. When you're 18, 19, you think you know everything, but you have no clue about anything. I feel way, way more grown up than I used to be."

A lot has happened to Kane and the Hawks since the 23-year-old talked about being a grown-up in that ballroom of an Ottawa hotel. The Buffalo, N.Y., native finished the regular season strong, carrying the team down the stretch and into the playoffs.

After a subpar postseason series against Phoenix during which he had four assists in the six-game loss, the offseason arrived.

Not more than a few weeks into it, photos of an allegedly intoxicated Kane attending a Cinco de Mayo celebration in Madison, Wis., found their way to deadspin.com. The photos showed Kane partying with college students, apparently passed out at a bar and, in one, appearing to walk away while talking with a police officer.

At first, it brought upon more "that's just Kaner being Kaner" thoughts. But things got more serious when the site began quoting anonymous sources alleging Kane choked a woman before being thrown out of a party and also hurled an anti-semitic slur during another altercation.

Patrick Kane

There's no way to know if either of those incidents occurred, as the Hawks denied access to Kane and other efforts to reach him were unsuccessful.

Moreover, anonymous sources on a website are an unreliable means of gathering information. Still, at best, his behavior was boorish and should be an embarrassment to Kane, whose image has begun to transform from that of an NHL superstar to one of a punch line to a joke that's been told far too many times.

The Hawks' hierarchy is mum on Kane's antics as management, too, declined to be interviewed.

The question begins to beg, is Kane wearing out his welcome with the organization? When he does grow up, or instead fritters away his remarkable talent in a haze of frat parties, will it be in a Hawks uniform?

The situation with Kane is not lost, but with each passing incident it spins a little further away.

Female MMA fighter blasts ex online

Here's a pro tip, fellas: If you hook up with a lady, don't call her and she later goes on to be a mixed-martial arts champ, don't try to get back on her good side. An ex-boyfriend of Strikeforce champ Ronda Rousey learned that on Instagram, where he contacted her and she told him to "[bleep] off." You go, girl.

Howard Stern

MIR. NICE GUY?

NEW 'AMERICA'S GOT TALENT' JUDGE
STERN PLANS TO OFFER 'REAL CRITICISM'

Los Angeles Times

Howard Stern isn't worried about a learning curve when it comes to being a judge on NBC's "America's Got Talent."

"Naked women, singers, jugglers, it's all the same," Stern cracked, referring to his time assessing a carnival of guests on his long-running morning radio show.

On the surface, the hiring of radio's bad boy to replace Piers Morgan as a judge alongside Sharon Osbourne and Howie Mandel on the reality series sounds like a typical TV stunt aimed at boosting a sagging show.

But "America's Got Talent," which launches its seventh season at 7 p.m. Monday, is hardly sagging. It is one of the few bright spots on struggling NBC's prime-time schedule, averaging almost 14 million viewers last summer, according to Nielsen. Furthermore, Stern appears serious about the new post.

"This really fit what I built a career on," Stern said. "We've had people come on the radio show for years that are talented or really odd. We've taken weirdos and made them stars."

Stern always has had a fondness for finding people with unusual skills and giving them a platform to either shine or humiliate themselves. However, sometimes it seemed he was more interested in amusing himself and his audience than in nurturing talent. Now he has to be nice, or at least nicer—the sensibilities of a broadcast TV audience are far more delicate than for satellite radio. He insists that won't be a problem.

"I think to come in and say now I'll be the harsh judge to fit the stereotype is ridiculous," he said. "Anyone who listens to the radio show knows that there are times you're harsh and there are times you're overly compassionate. It's called being a full human being."

Stern did promise to shake up the talent show format—at least a little bit.

"I do think this kind of television risks going the way of the disco ball, that if the judges don't step up and offer real criticism that these types of shows will start to get too dull," he said, referring to some of the bland comments on "American Idol."

“Trusting him to do the right thing is like trusting North Korea to do the right thing.”

—Parents Television Council President Tim Winters on Howard Stern

Stern did show a soft touch during one recent audition after he eliminated a child who had more spirit than skills. The boy was on the verge of bursting into tears after the buzzer went off and the lanky Stern rushed to the stage to comfort him.

Not everyone is buying that Stern can clean up his act.

The Parents Television Council, the advocacy group that often grumbles about the coarsening of American culture, is keeping its eye on the show and asking advertisers to do the same in case Stern crosses the line.

"Trusting him to do the right thing is like trusting North Korea to do the right thing," said PTC President Tim Winters, who said he'll give the show three episodes before deciding whether to call for an advertiser boycott.

Some advertisers may take a wait-and-see approach, but media buyers say there is not a lot of concern about Stern scaring away sponsors.

"Advertisers could be skittish right now just because it's Howard Stern, but two or three weeks into this when they see he can be entertaining in a safe way I think there will be no worries," predicted Andy Donchin, an executive vice president with Carat, whose clients include Home Depot and Outback Steakhouse.

Although the idea of tapping Stern may seem obvious to his fans who know of his love for talent shows—he was on the "American Idol" bandwagon from Season 1—Paul Telegdy, NBC's president of alternative programming, needed a little persuasion.

He was sold after listening to Stern interview Lady Gaga. "This guy is mesmerizing," Telegdy recalled thinking.

Although Stern's agent, Don Buchwald, told NBC he didn't think his client would be interested, Telegdy persisted and Stern surprised even Buchwald by saying he was game.

Telegdy and Buchwald declined to comment on what Stern is making, but it's been pegged at $15 million this season plus bonuses if ratings go up, this person said.

Stern is known for taking over any stage he occupies—as David Letterman can attest. "America's Got Talent" executive producer Jason Raff acknowledged initially having fears that Stern's over-the-top personality would overwhelm the show.

"That was very concerning," Raff said. So far though, Raff said it hasn't been an issue. "He has been good at being gracious. I'm sure there are times when he pulls himself back."

And if that changes?

"Sharon is no wallflower and will tell him to shut up," Raff predicted.

Stern said he has no plans to run roughshod over Osbourne and Mandel, who have been frequent guests on his radio show.

"I'm not looking to blow the thing up and ruin it," Stern said. "I'm a fan of the show, I want to see it grow."

As for the Parents Television Council and his other critics, Stern has a message: "Tune in, check out if I'm a demon."

5 top cycling destinations

Reuters

While most travelers know Copenhagen and Amsterdam are ideal for exploring by bicycle, the rise of bike-sharing and bike tours in other cities is making discovering other destinations by bicycle easier than ever. That's why the members and editors of travel website virtualltourist.com have compiled a list of the "Top 10 Spots to Explore by Bicycle." Here are five of them. Neither Reuters nor RedEye has endorsed this list.

TRIBUNE

Portland, Ore.

Two Portland parks line the Willamette River, Waterfront Park to the west and Eastbank Esplanade to the east, allowing bicyclists to take in both the city view and the river's scenery. A two-block detour from Waterfront Park at the Burnside Bridge will take travelers to the Portland Saturday Market. For a great example of Oregon's famous conservation efforts, travelers can head slightly farther south to the Oaks Bottom Wildlife Refuge.

GETTY IMAGES

Montreal

The first North American city to adopt a bicycle-sharing program, Montreal has 2,400 miles of bike trails and paths, including popular routes along the Lachine Canal, the quays of the Old Port and Rue McGill. Montreal sits in the center of the Route Verte, a series of bikeways throughout Quebec that starts farther west at Fort-Coulogne and connects Montreal with Quebec City to the north.

Austin, Texas

Since one of cycling's great celebrities, seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, calls Austin home, it's understandable that more people are exploring it by bike. After biking the paths along Lady Bird Lake downtown, sightseers can ride up to the Barton Creek Greenbelt. For a little more of the flavor that makes Austin famous, start your ride in the SoCo (South of Congress) neighborhood, biking up Congress Avenue and over the Congress Street Bridge (with its bats) toward 6th Street, home of many of the country's most legendary music venues.

Hell's Gate National Park in Kenya

Located about 58 miles northwest of Nairobi, Hell's Gate National Park is small by African standards, but has a variety of animal species rarely seen anywhere else in the world, including lions, leopards and cheetahs. In addition to being able to explore the park by bicycle, guests are allowed to camp in the park.

AP FILE

Vietnam and Thailand

In Vietnam, visitors can take Route 1 from the capital city of Hanoi to Ho Chi Minh City, traveling along the coast and exploring scenic villages along the way. Another suggestion is to take a train from Bangkok to its UNESCO neighbor, Ayutthaya, then rent a bike to explore at your own pace. In addition to the ancient temples and ruins, the Summer Palace and notable local markets are located here.

Learning :-)'s of emoticons

MCT

Emoticons—those jumbles of punctuation in an email or text—might leave you scratching your head and feeling :-S.

Decoding them can be exercise in :-P.

Sometimes, it makes you want to break down and :-(.

For those moments, there is chatslang.com, a dictionary of sorts for emoticons, as well as chat slang, in which a few letters or numbers can convey far more than a simple FYI.

Per Christensson of Edina, Minn., started the site five years ago. Chat-Slang emerged from Christensson's work with his other website, techterms.com, a dictionary of computer and technology terms from Archie to Zone File. People were using abbreviations that he, hardly wizened at 31, struggled to understand.

His puzzlement raises the question of how quickly a new term becomes universally understood, at least among a texter's peers. "The younger generation picks up on things more quickly," he said. "But the whole reason we run this website is because people don't know."

As far back as 1857, Morse code operators used the number 73 to express "love and kisses." The satirical magazine, Puck, included typographical emoticons in 1881, but they never really caught on.

Then in 1982, Scott Fahlman, a professor at Carnegie Mellon University, became the first person documented to have used punctuation to suggest emotion, according to accounts by the school. Fahlman typed :-D and :-(to convey happy feelings or a frown.

Yet even those symbols languished until texting took off and texters wanted to convey intent, Christensson said. "That's where emoticons are extremely useful, as funny as they are, or as unprofessional as they can be," he said. "If you're being sarcastic, you add a smiley face so people know you're joking and not being a jerk."

Chatslang.com has released an iPhone app so you can find out what someone texted you, in case you're stumped.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Taurus April 20-May 20

You need to be more ambitious. Don't settle for second best. Why are you dating somebody who is simply OK? Don't waste energy on people or situations that don't completely engage you.

Gemini May 21-June 21

With the sun entering your sign for a few weeks, you'll be experiencing a personal New Year. This is a good time to take stock of your life. Maybe it's time to discard the useless loser boyfriend.

Cancer June 22-July 22

A sensitive moon is making you super emotional. You'll cry at silly cat videos and freak out whenever somebody uses the words "love," "relationship" or "marriage." It's best to stay in and avoid answering the phone.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Your lover might decide to take charge. Usually you like to be the one in control, but now it's time for you to be more passive. Venus says let your honey tie you up, scold you and give you lusty instructions.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Friendly Mercury is helping you connect with your true sexual desires. You won't feel so shy about telling your partner what you really crave. Hopefully, he or she will be able to provide it. If not, you might consider other options.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're going through one of your indecisive periods. With the moon opposite your sign, you're questioning every encounter you've ever had, including all those ill-fated make-out sessions.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

People around you will be acting crazier than usual, thanks to the moon. Your boyfriend might decide he's fallen in love with a ham-

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

As the sun moves opposite your sign, it's best to take it easy. Don't get involved in any complicated romantic entanglements and avoid overly melodramatic reunions with former flames.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Try to be open to meeting new people, even if you detest the idea with every fiber of your being. Mercury will help you present yourself with confidence and pizzazz. You'll be looking good, too, so dare to show off a little.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The sun is making you hyper and lusty. You won't want to just stay at home with your honey doing the same old, same old. Instead, you'll be cooking up plots for exotic affairs. Dream on.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could be wondering if pursuing love is even worth it. Venus is filling your mind with painful memories of all the relationships which ended in torture, heartbreak and/or obsession. You can do better.

Aries March 21-April 19

You'll be attracted to bizarre and unusual people. The moon is creating a lot of exotic enticement. You could be tempted to sabotage a long-term relationship just because you spot a stranger with weird tattoos.

Literary Events

SENATOR BILL BRADLEY

The Chicago Public Library welcomes former U.S. Senator Bill Bradley, who will discuss his book We Can All Do Better, in which he offers his own concise, powerful and personal review of the state of the union. The free program takes place on Monday, May 14 at 6 p.m., in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium, at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 South State St. As one of the most influential public figures of our time, Bradley's credentials include representing the State of New Jersey in the Senate for 18 years, as well as being a financial and investment advisor, an Olympic and NBA athlete, a national radio host and bestselling author. For more information, visit chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050.

JOYCE SELANDER

The Chicago Public Library welcomes Chicago Board of Trade insider Joyce Selander, who will discuss her book Joyce, Queen of the Mountain: Female Courage and Hand-to-Hand Combat in the World's Largest Money Pit. The free program takes place on Thursday, May 24 at 6 p.m., in the Chicago Authors Room on the 7th floor at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 South State St. Selander's memoir is an inspiring odyssey of her days as the first woman to physically trade 30-year treasury bonds in the pits of the CBOT. For more information, visit chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050.

What's your definition of mental toughness in the NBA?

Charles Motherlovin' Oakley. Still. Google "Charles Oakley workout." Dude is a BEAAAAAST.

A team contending for the best record in the NBA with its best player on the bench.

Not getting "T'd" out no matter how "T'd" off you get at the referees.

Being able to get by without a shoe deal.

Daughtry swings into Bronzeville

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @aboutluisgomez

It was difficult to tell if the band students at Bronzeville Institute Scholastic were familiar with Daughtry's music when the multi-platinum-selling rock band performed Friday at the high school, not far from the old Robert Taylor Homes. Besides a few students tapping their feet during the two-song acoustic performance in the school's band room, the well-behaved class was mostly silent and motionless.

Chris Daughtry himself wasn't sure if they'd heard his band's music before. The "American Idol" alum and lead singer said he looked down while singing—a hand-written "The BSI Panther Band Welcomes Daughtry" sign behind him—because he feels vulnerable performing in small environments sans microphone. Still, he believes his band was able to connect with the students during a Q&A.

HEADS UP

Supermodel Cindy Crawford will attend Starlight Children's Foundation Midwest's annual gala Saturday at The Standard Club. ... Mark-Paul Gosselaar and Breckin Meyer, stars of TNT's "Franklin and Bash," will host a screening party for the series Thursday at The Vic Theatre.

"I hope it's inspiring," Daughtry said in an adjacent room after the appearance, part of the Starburst Music with the Masters series, which benefits the VH1 Save The Music Foundation. "That's the reason we do it. We want to inspire kids to do something with their music. Whatever they have a passion for, go for it. You can see it on some of their faces—the ones really taking it in."

"They see we're real people who love what we do and not holier-than-thou rock stars with sunglasses on. They think, 'Wow. OK, maybe it's possible for someone like myself to make it and do big things.'"

The students asked Daughtry and bandmates Josh Paul and Brian Craddock what they would be doing if they weren't musicians, what the best part of being a musician is, why they wanted to become musicians and how Daughtry felt when he won "American Idol." (Many people assume Daughtry won because his band has sold more records than any "Idol" alum other than Carrie Underwood and Kelly Clarkson, but, as he pointed out to the student, he actually came in fourth during the 2006 season of the show.)

The Grammy-nominated band later joined the high school band as they played composer James Swearingen's "To a New Beginning." Because there was no need for a rock star with a booming voice in the song, Daughtry played what appeared to be a kettledrum in the back of the room. The 32-year-old North Carolina native embraced his minor role and struck the drum with dramatic flare.

"I hope I didn't ruin your song," he announced to the class afterward.

Last days

It's curtains for sunglasses-sporting detective Horatio Caine. CBS announced that after 10 years, "CSI: Miami" will go off the air. The original "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" and spinoff "CSI: NY" are safe for now. We guess that means (putting on our sunglasses) David Caruso's check ... is CANCELED. YEOWWWW!!!

Terrible title town

"The Office" star Mindy Kaling's new project might not be as racy as we'd expected. A few days after announcing the series pickup, Fox changed the name of Kaling's show, in which she plays an OB-GYN, from "It's Messy" (bad) to "The Mindy Project" (worse), ew.com reports. Why don't you mull it over and get back to us?

Ben loves moms

Ben Affleck took to Facebook recently to make a special Mother's Day video, one that featured his mom, wife and mothers and children in the Congo, where the actor founded a charity. "I want to say Happy Mother's Day to all the moms in my life—my mom, Chris, and my amazing wife, Jennifer, who is an incredible, spectacular, world-class mom," Affleck said. You done good, Ben.

Betty has Obama's back

Betty White, star of "Hot in Cleveland," said she's doing something this election cycle she normally avoids: backing a candidate. White, 90, said she's voting for President Obama, according to USA Today, even though she's apolitical, because of "how he represents us."

The Unfollow Game?

It's been a few months, but Russell Brand just got around to unfollowing Katy Perry on Twitter, the New York Daily News reports. Perry clicked the "unfollow" button right after the two parted ways in December, but maybe Brand wasn't sure the breakup needed to extend to social media until now.

$103.2 MILLION

That's the record-setting amount "The Avengers" made in its second weekend in theaters. It's the first movie to make more than $100 million in its second week of release.
